Mountain electro-regenesis training centre

After severely damaging his spinal cord in a massive motorcycle accident, Adelaide's Patrick McGrath was left paralysed from the neck down, with no sensation in his body all the way down to his hands and feet.

A quadriplegic with no hope for recovery, he laid in bed as still as a stone for eight years. Today, however after just 14 weeks of treatment with a new therapeutic technology called electro-regenesis, Patrick is reported to be able to freely rotate his arms and move his upper spine. He has regained physical sensation in his hands and feet. His physician, Dr Zash Baran describes these results as "amazing and truly fantastic".

Having applied this new medical technology to a wide range of other maladies in his clinic, Dr Baran said there was not a single medical condition that was not immediately improved by electro-regenesis.

Electro-regenesis therapy is the brainchild of Dr Keith Wendell, a holistic healer and "medical metaphysicist".

He said his Mt Tamborine clinic has become the world-training centre for doctors and healers all over the world who come to him to learn his healing techniques.

Dr Wendell has invented a system using what he described as the scientifically proven premise that the human body is essentially a highly complex, constantly self-transforming, full integrated energy system, not simply an anatomical structure subject only to the mundane laws of mechanics and chemistry.

Electro-regenesis technology generates a gently pulsating stream of electrons that flow smoothly through the body's internal energy network, like water gliding slowly through a field of irrigation channels, gradually permeating every tissue and saturating every cell with the healing energy and generative power of electrons.

The therapy is based on Dr Wendell's scientific discoveries and metaphysical incites regarding the essential nature of the bio-electric currents which animate the human body and the channels that conduct them through the human energy system.

He has found that the energy can only function as a healing force when the form of the body's bio-electric field or "aura" is properly balanced.

It has taken Dr Wendell almost two decades of progressive experimental tests and clinical trials to perfect the technology that finally rendered his theoretical insights into practical tools that can replicate the natural bio-electric currents of the human energy system.

Dr Wendell is currently treating a range of patients at his Tamborine Mountain clinic. For more information contact him on 0755 450 451.
